Just to say, the two had a decent weekend.1This is Ronaldo's first goal from a direct-kick for Juventus. He only took 43 attempts. Before Torino, his latest goal in a direct kick came for Real Madrid at the World Club against Grêmio on 16 December 2017. At that time, Messi has scored 18. Overall, though, Ronaldo holds the edge – he has 55 goals from direct free kick, thanks 52.25Ronaldo is the first Juventus player to score 25 or more goals in one series a season since Omar Svori in 1960/61. What makes this staat even more remarkable is that, in the frame this time, Juve won league title 23 without a 25+ goal strike! Also, 25: Ronaldo is the player to first score 25+ league goals in a season at England (PL Era), Spain and Italy. The owners are all over. Kristiano Ronaldo celebrates after closing a goal for Juventus against Torino in serie A. Getty Images19Messi has provided 19 assists for FC Barcelona in La Liga this season, Best Of All-Time Return of a top-flight season.41The only players to reach 40 goal contributions in league competition across Europe's top 5 leagues? Thank you, with 41 [22 goals, 19 assists](Stats courtesy: ESPN Stats and Info Group) despite the negative track they may have at specific moments of their careers, there's no doubt that Lionel Mesi and Kristiano Ronaldo are two of the best free kickers taken in the last decade. In this section we will analyze this aspect of the game. In this first graph we can see in which teams Thanks and Kristiano Ronaldo have scored the piece goals. We can see that Mesi has scored most of his kick for FC Barcelona and Kristiano Ronaldo for Real Madrid. While Ronaldo played in Spain in this second graph we can see how Kristiano Ronaldo suffered a drastic reduction in the number of free kick goals in recent years, while Leo Thanks experienced just trend opposed, now tell much more Before. While Ronaldo played in Spain in the third graph we can see how Messi's curve is more pronouncing than the ones in Kristiano Ronaldo, represented clearly how Argentina's will reach the Portuguese figures, despite giving scored their first free goal 5 seasons later. In 2011/2012 season, the distance between the two became 26 goals, while today it is practically overlooked. In the fourth graph we see how Cristiano Ronaldo provided more goals kicked until 27 years old, while Leo Messi found his excellence in that old forwards. In the fifth graph we appreciate that Leo Messi reached the number of kick goals that Kristiano Ronaldo had at his age, defeat the 16 goal difference they had in 27. Free precision kick when it comes to the accuracy of free kick, Messi's excellent rate in the current season will hit. If we observe how efficiency both have evolved, we see that in the last 4 years there has been an ongoing increase in thanks and a gradual decline in Kristiano Ronaldo. Keep in mind that the first averages are not accurate, as we don't have data from previous attempts. Missing attempts with portuguese national team missing attempts and Sporting Portugal attempts missing with Manchester United current season incomplete () Incomplete Data does not take into account for final calculation. Lacking attempts with the Argentine national team current incomplete season () incomplete data does not take into account for the final calculation. This ad report followed Beau Saccor on Facebook It is difficult not to be entertained by Paulo Dybala's reaction to Kristiano Ronaldo's account of Juventus in the summer of 2018. The Argentine immediately sent a cheeky message to the former WhatsApp group chat squad, says Sorry, Miralem Pjanic), but I don't think you'll take much free kick this year.Of course, Dybala wouldn't either. Ronaldo was famed as a set-piece specialist and, as the most expensive signing in the club's history, he immediately occupied the center stage each time given a free kick to shoot distance. We know how it works." Dybala told Gazzetta's sports in October 2019. On the left, there's Kristiano; we're just standing here to make a good picture! Neither Dybala nor Pjanic had any issues with the Portuguese taking precedent on free kick. Both have repeatedly praised Ronaldo's place prowess, which is unlikely to do. Ronaldo has, after all, scored 55 free-kick goals in his career – which is three more than his great rival Lionel Mesi. However, when one dig deeper into their statistics, a photo develops differently. Ronaldo scored 33 free kicks during his nine seasons at Real Madrid between 2009 and 2018 – as much as Barca ace Thanks, albeit from slightly more attempts (444 to 419) – but he fell spread-rate dramatically in the interim. There have been two free-kick goals for Portugal since the summer of 2018, including a memorable against Spain in the World Cup, but in his past five seasons of club football, Ronaldo has denied just seven in all competitions - and out of 136 attempts. Thanks, by contrast, has grown ever more dangerous. Thirty of his 52 career-shock goals have come in the past five years. The Argentine has had twice as many attempts at club level as Ronaldo during that time, but his conversion rate (11 percent) is still far superior following Juventus's bid for forward (5%). Ronaldo didn't just fall behind Thanks either. Over the past five years, Ronaldo has also been outside of this area by Neymar (11), Willian (11), Dani Parejo (10), Dimitri Payet (10), Angel di Maria (nine), Aleksandar Kolarov (eight) and Antoine Griezmann (eight) – everyone took at least 43 fewer attempts. Dimensions, Pjanic (12) and Dybala (11) also ranked above Ronaldo for their free-kick goals since 2015, which is why so many Juventus fans have grown increasingly disgusted by the chest order in Turin. It actually becomes something of a running joke, with some supporters openly asking online if Ronaldo receives a bonus for hitting the opposition wall, while Pjanic asked in an interview with Tuttosport if the Cast even manages to score in any training. That may be disrespectful towards one of the greatest goals the game has ever seen but the fact that Ronaldo has yet to score one free kick for Juventus since joining Madrid in July 2018 (Thanks 12 bags in the same period). This is in spite of the fact he is responsible for 40 of the 78 attempts. What's more, there's evidence to suggest that his almost constant presence on any dead ball is actually wounding Jive – or at least significantly the impact of the true set-piece specialists. Juventus have noted just three free kicks over the past two seasons and even one of those – Dybala's most recent strike, against Brescia in February - arched only came on because Ronaldo wasn't on the pitch. It's also harsh in the season before Ronaldo's arrival, Dybala and Pjanic score seven free kicks between them, and the forward converted four in 25 attempts, with the Bosnian getting back into the net with three of his 20 efforts. Taking free kick away the pair has clearly done no favor at all. Dybala, Pjanic and many fans saw the funny side of the situation but it actually went beyond a joke at this stage. Ronaldo may have once been a good free-kicker take but he certainly isn't over yet. Earlier Juventus accepted this, the better. Better.
